

Introducing Marissa Hudler, the esteemed Wound Care Nurse Manager at Baylor Scott & White Health in Temple, Texas. Marissa's tenure with Baylor Scott & White has been marked by significant achievements and professional growth. Commencing her career as a Charge/Staff nurse in 2004, she entered the healthcare realm with a profound dedication to service and empathy.

Marissa's trajectory shifted when she discovered her fervor for wound care, leading her to pursue specialization as a Wound Care Nurse Specialist in 2010. Since then, she has emerged as a respected figure within the wound care community, recognized for her expertise and positive influence.

In her current capacity as the Regional Wound Care Nurse Manager for the Temple, Texas region, Marissa leads a team of nurses across various hospitals. Beyond managerial responsibilities, she is an avid educator, sharing her knowledge and enthusiasm with colleagues and peers.

Marissa's professional journey reached notable milestones with her presentations at esteemed conferences. At the Symposium on Advanced Wound Care in 2022, she and her team addressed the challenge of pressure injuries in Covid-19 patients, achieving a remarkable 100% reduction within six months. Her international impact was evident when she spoke at the International Conference on Wound Healing and Critical Care in Madrid, Spain, in December 2023, garnering recognition and accolades from the global wound care community.

Furthermore, Marissa has demonstrated innovation in her advocacy for smartphone technology in wound identification. Through strategic implementation, she and her team significantly reduced hospital-acquired pressure injuries, showcasing their achievements at prominent events such as the Symposium on Advanced Wound Care in 2020.

Let us commend Marissa for her outstanding contributions as a Wound Care Nurse Manager. Her unwavering dedication, positivity, and commitment to advancing wound care practices are truly commendable. If you know of individuals who mirror Marissa's exemplary work, we encourage you to share their stories with us. Together, let's celebrate and inspire excellence in wound care.
